This week our reporter around town asked: "If you could take a trip anywhere in the world, where would you go?"

Alison, 28, administrative assistant: I'd go to Antarctica. It's so far away, and it would be so different. I read an article that said it's the coldest and windiest place on Earth. I love the winter, though, so I wouldn't mind the snow and ice!

Matt, 33, computer analyst: I'd go to the Andes – between Chile and Argentina. I understand the scenery is really beautiful there. I'd hire a guide and go hiking through the mountains. I've heard there are several active volcanoes in the area.

Hilary, 48, salesperson: Could I take my husband? If he couldn't come with me, I'd probably go to Rio de Janeiro and just lie on the beach! But if he could go, we'd go to China. He loves architecture, so we'd visit some historical places – like the Forbidden City in Beijing and the Great Wall.

Bob, 21, student: I'd go to the Outback in Australia. I've read about places like Coober Pedy and Alice Springs – where most tourists go – but I think I'd want to go to a cattle ranch – in the middle of nowhere.
