Four Reasons to Worry about Spam

Most Internet users get irritating, unwanted, commercial messages called spam every day. "So what's the big deal?" you may ask. Here are four reasons why you should worry about spam.

1. Spammers send thousands of identical messages with a push of the "send" button, but you have to look through all of your messages and delete the spam. That can add up to a lot of wasted time. Some experts say employees spend up to an hour a day sorting and deleting junk mail.
2. Although improved antivirus software has helped the problem, spam messages can still contain viruses. Sometimes, a spam email will ask you to go to a website and type in personal information. This can be extremely dangerous.
3. Products in spam ads are frequently (though not always) low quality or worthless. Think about it: Companies that make high-quality products don't mind paying for advertising. However, sellers of low-quality goods would rather use spam because it costs very little.
4. Spam messages often say that you asked to receive the message, but, of course, that's usually not true. Many spammers use email addresses without permission. And even though spammers say they'll take your name off their list if you ask them, many of them don't.

1. Most Internet users don't need to worry about spam.
a. True b. False c. Doesn't say
2. Spammers are people who get a lot of spam.
a. True b. False c. Doesn't say
3. Spam that contains viruses used to be a much bigger problem.
a. True b. False c. Doesn't say
4. It is expensive to create and send spam messages.
a. True b. False c. Doesn't say
5. Spammers get email addresses when people buy products online.
a. True b. False c. Doesn't say
