Jobs in the Future

What will work in the United States be like in the future? No one knows exactly, of course, but everyone agrees that there will be some major changes. Here are some predictions.

- There will be more older people in the workplace. Why? There will be fewer young people in the U.S. population, and older workers will retire later.
- People will change their jobs more often. It's normal now for people to make one or two big career changes in their lives. In the future, people may change their careers many times before they stop working.
- People will need an education to get a good job, but a college education won't be enough. Many college graduates will have to go back to school for more training, especially if they change jobs.
- Technology will continue to change the workplace, but it probably won't make jobs any easier. Workers in factory jobs will need more skills because they will have to understand how to use new technology.

- a. Everyone thinks there will be important changes in the U.S. workplace.
- b. There will be more young people in the workplace.
- c. Most older people will retire sooner.
- d. These days, people often change their careers once or twice.
- e. A college education will be more important.
- f. Many workers will need to get a higher degree.
- g. Technology will make it a lot easier to work in a factory.
- h. Factory workers will need to learn new skills.
